SANTA FE — Lidia Cleveland had offered to be with her son when he walked into Santa Fe High School on Tuesday.

She wanted to make sure he felt supported, although the senior, Jacob Hinton, said he wanted to return on his own.

Still, the 17-year-old was far from alone.

Hundreds of well-wishers joined Cleveland along the side of Texas 6 in front of the school as students returned for classes for the first time since a May 18 shooting rampage that killed 10 people and injured 13 others.

A 17-year-old student has been charged with capital murder in the killings.

The news kept coming: Immigrant mothers and fathers separated from and searching for their children. Nearly 1,500 unaccompanied minors unaccounted for after they left the federal shelter system. Reports of migrant child-abuse allegations without a thorough investigation.

“When I saw all this news come out, and I saw there was so much passion and anger about everything, I decided to

Axing of ‘Roseanne’ hailed — and booed

Roseanne Barr called it a “bad joke.” But ABC wasn’t laughing Tuesday when it canceled its hit reboot of her show “Roseanne” after she went on a Twitter tirade that included a racist remark.

One of Barr’s tweets, which she’s since deleted, referred to former Obama adviser Valerie Jarrett as being the product of the Muslim Brotherhood and the “Planet of the Apes.”

ABC Entertainment President Channing Dungey called Barr’s comment “abhorrent, repugnant and inconsistent with our values” in a statement announcing the cancellation.

While the move riled some fans who expressed their feelings online, experts in San Antonio and elsewhere applauded the network for up-

Feds counted 64 Maria deaths

By Sheri Fink
NEW YORK TIMES

As hurricane season begins this week, experts still are trying to count the number of deaths caused by last year’s devastating Hurricane Maria in Puerto Rico.

The latest estimate: about 4,600, many of them from delayed medical care.

Residents of Puerto Rico died at a significantly higher rate during the three months following the hurricane than they did in the previous year, according to the results of a new study by a group of independent researchers from Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health and other
